

Jane Smith
Dr. Williams
Eng. 101
2 Jan. 2017

MLA Format: double-spaced, 12 point font, Times New Roman, 1 inch margins

Sample Paper in MLA Format: The Great World and Other Stuff

The world is full of interesting trivia. For example, events in history often have strange back stories. When a copy of Darwin's Origin of Species was sent to an important British publisher, the editor said the book was nice but wouldn't sell. Bryson explains how Darwin's editor advised him to write a nice book on pigeons because, of course, everyone likes pigeons (381). Names are also interesting. Although few have heard of "Yippies," they were a short lived group in the 60's who staged some poorly planned protests (Holloway 214-15). Even animals have strange names. A cat encyclopedia describes a Ragdoll as a cat, not a toy ("Ragdoll" 112). Although the name brings up images of stupidity, the Dodo is just an extinct bird that was unable to fly ("Dodo").

Not all the stories behind the names are believable, however. The book, A Short History of Nearly Everything, tells how explorers came back with strange tales of the "homo caudatus" or "man with a tail" (Bryson 382). Just as strange are some of the laws on the books. For example, according to one source, it is illegal to walk around in high-heeled shoes in Carmel-by-the Sea, California (James). Places can be interesting, too. One science website mentions how a person can "see both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans on a clear day from the Republic of Panama" (Loveridge). Even fairy tales have interesting origins. According to legend, the Man in the Moon was placed in the moon as punishment for collecting sticks on Sunday ("Manic Man"). So a lot of interesting, if useless, information can be discovered in the most unlikely of places. This all just goes to show we live in a really quirky world!

Works Cited

Bryson, Bill. A Short History of Nearly Everything. Broadway, 2003.

“Dodo.” Encyclopaedia Britannica Online, Encyclopaedia Britannica, 2009.

Holloway, David. “Yippies.” St. James Encyclopedia of Popular Culture, edited by Tom Pendergast, vol. 5, St. James, 2000.

James, Tom. “Little-Known Foot Laws.” Podiatry Management, Mar. 2003, pp. 143-45. General OneFile.

Loveridge, John. “The Middle Man.” NewScientist.com, Reed Business Information, www.newscientist.com/id=1w498. Accessed 15 Aug. 2015.

“The Manic Man in the Moon.” All Info about Nursery Rhymes, 30 July 2015, www.nurseryrhymes.allinfoabout.com.

“Ragdoll.” The Encyclopedia of the Cat, edited by Bruce Fogle, DK, 1997, pp. 112-13.

Works Cited Page:

The last page of your paper; entries should be in alphabetical order with a hanging indent.

For Websites: If a website has no publication date, skip it, but add an Accessed date to the end of the entry.

MLA Formatting Style

1. MLA Header: Include a standard MLA header in the header section of each page in the top-right corner. The header should be your last name and page number: Smith 1.
2. Standard MLA Format: Double space the entire paper, and use a standard 12-point font such as Times New Roman. Use 1-inch margins.
3. Standard MLA Heading: Begin with the normal MLA heading (your name, instructor's name, course section, and date each on a separate line) in the top-left corner.
4. Title: On the next line after the heading, center the title of your paper.
5. Body: On the line after your title, begin the body of your paper (no extra lines). Indent the first line of each paragraph half an inch.
6. In-Text Citations: Include in-text citations in parenthesis ( ) throughout the body of your paper whenever you borrow words or ideas from an outside source. See the Library's Quick Guide for MLA In-Text Citations for additional information.
7. Works Cited Page: The last page of your research paper should be a list of all the sources you've cited throughout your paper. Title this page Work(s) Cited, and then list your sources in MLA format. The entries should be in alphabetical order and have a hanging indent.

For additional formatting information, Ask-A-Librarian or see The MLA Style Center's Website (https://style.mla.org/formatting-papers/).